Friday Night's Combined Services Meeting

There was only a small number in attendance for the combined service clubs meeting last Friday evening at the Flour Mill. I guess this can be attributed to it being a Friday night - it was very cold - and all clubs have quite a few members away on holidays.

Apex were the host club and after chairperson Dee Vidler welcomed all in attendance she called on a representative of each club to give a brief summary of their past years activities.

These activities covered a wide variety of services provided to our community and each club was enthusiastic about a plan to combine forces and work together on a major project in the near future.

Dee then introduced guest speaker Jimmy Ivell who spoke on the role he is involved in with My Future Academy. The Academy runs courses for leadership, health service assistance, project management and ageing support. Jimmy spoke on the numbers effected by mental illness and the need for us all to be aware of the vast numbers in our society who need to be made aware of help that is available if required.

A Little Light Relief

Night after night, a keen ornithologist stood in his backyard hooting like an owl. After weeks of getting no reply, he suddenly heard an owl hoot back at him. He was overjoyed at the response and for the next nine months man and bird kept up a regular dialogue of hooting. He was fascinated by his ability to relate to a wild creature and kept a detailed record of all their conversations.

Just when he was about to take his findings to the Natural History Society, his wife happened to be talking to a neighbour who lived four doors away.

"My husband spends his night calling to owls," she confided.

"That's funny," said the neighbour. "So does mine!"
